Factors Influencing Airbnb Listing Prices in New York City

Executive Summary

This project investigates the factors that influence the pricing of Airbnb listings in New York City (NYC). By analyzing a comprehensive dataset from Airbnb, we aim to identify key variables that significantly affect listing prices and develop predictive models to estimate prices based on these features. We employ exploratory data analysis (EDA) to understand data distributions and relationships, and we use both linear regression and random forest models to predict prices. Our analysis reveals that factors such as location (borough and neighborhood), room type, minimum nights, availability, and number of reviews significantly impact Airbnb prices in NYC. The random forest model outperforms the linear regression model in predictive accuracy, suggesting that non-linear relationships are present in the data. These insights can help hosts optimize their pricing strategies and assist guests in making informed booking decisions.

1. Introduction

Project Description and Background

Airbnb has revolutionized the hospitality industry by allowing property owners to rent out their spaces to travelers worldwide. New York City, as one of the most visited cities globally, has a highly competitive and diverse short-term rental market. With thousands of listings across five boroughs, understanding what drives Airbnb prices can benefit hosts looking to optimize their rental income and guests seeking affordable options.

Project Goals

- Identify Key Factors Influencing Prices: Determine which features significantly impact Airbnb listing prices in NYC.
- Predictive Modeling: Develop models to predict listing prices based on these features.
- Provide Insights for Stakeholders: Offer actionable insights for hosts and guests to make informed decisions.

2. Data Description

Dataset Overview

We utilize the “New York City Airbnb Open Data” from Kaggle, which includes detailed information about Airbnb listings in NYC for the year 2019.

Data Source: Kaggle - New York City Airbnb Open Data Number of Observations: 48,895 listings Variables: id: Listing ID name: Name of the listing host_id: Host ID host_name: Host name neighbourhood_group: Borough (Manhattan, Brooklyn, etc.) neighbourhood: Specific neighborhood within the borough latitude: Latitude coordinate longitude: Longitude coordinate room_type: Type of room offered price: Price per night in USD minimum_nights: Minimum number of nights required to book number_of_reviews: Total number of reviews last_review: Date of the last review reviews_per_month: Average number of reviews per month calculated_host_listings_count: Number of listings the host has availability_365: Number of days the listing is available per year

Boxplot of price by borough
ggplot(df, aes(x = neighbourhood_group, y = price)) + geom_boxplot() + ylim(0, 500) +
  labs(title = "Price Distribution by Borough", x = "Borough", y = "Price ($)")
```

Price Distribution by Borough

Observation:

Manhattan has higher median prices compared to other boroughs. Staten Island has a wider range of prices despite fewer listings.

Pairwise Scatter Plots

Select numerical variables
numerical_vars <- df %>% select(price, minimum_nights, number_of_reviews, reviews_per_month, availability)

Pairwise scatter plots
ggpairs(numerical_vars)
```

Observation:

Weak correlations between ‘price’ and other numerical variables. ‘availability_365’ shows some negative correlation with ‘number_of_reviews’.

Exploring Location Data

Using Neighborhoods and Coordinates:

Number of unique neighborhoods
num_neighbourhoods <- length(unique(df$neighbourhood)) cat("Number of unique neighborhoods:", num_neighbourhoods)

Number of unique neighborhoods: 221

Visualize the number of listings per neighborhood
top_neighbourhoods <- df %>% group_by(neighbourhood) %>% summarise(count = n()) %>% arrange(desc(count)) %>% top_n(20, count)

ggplot(top_neighbourhoods, aes(x = reorder(neighbourhood, count), y = count)) + geom_bar(stat = "identity", fill = "steelblue") + coord_flip() + labs(title = "Top 20 Neighborhoods by Number of Listings", x = "Neighborhood", y = "Number of Listings")

Top 20 Neighborhoods by Number of Listings

We have identified 221 unique neighbourhoods in New York, displaying the top 20 and the amount of listings. We can see Williamsburg and Bedford_Stuyevsant as the most popular by a decent margin. ### Correlation Analysis

Compute correlation matrix
corr_matrix <- cor(numeric_vars) corrplot(corr_matrix, method = "number", type = "upper")
```

Map of Borough

```
ggplot(data = df, aes(x = longitude, y = latitude, color = df$neighbourhood_group)) +
  geom_point(size = 0.75)

Map of Room Types Distribution

ggplot(data = df, aes(x = longitude, y = latitude, color = room_type)) +
  geom_point(size = 0.75)

Observation:

There is a moderate positive correlation between ‘number_of_reviews’ and ‘reviews_per_month’. ‘availability_365’ has a weak correlation with other variables.

4. Methodology

Rationale for Method Selection

Exploratory Data Analysis (EDA): To understand data distributions, identify patterns, and detect anomalies. Data Preprocessing: To clean and prepare the data for modeling, ensuring reliable results. Linear Regression: As a baseline model to understand the linear relationships between variables. Random Forest Regression: To capture non-linear relationships and interactions between variables. Cross-Validation: To assess model performance and prevent overfitting.

Data Preprocessing Steps

Handling Missing Values: Imputed missing values appropriately. Outlier Removal: Removed listings with prices above the 99th percentile to reduce skewness. Encoding Categorical Variables: Converted categorical variables into factors and created dummy variables. Feature Scaling: Scaled numerical features where necessary.

5. Analysis and Findings

Data Cleaning and Preparation

Remove extreme outliers in 'price' (above 99th percentile)
price_threshold <- quantile(df$price, 0.99)

df <- df %>% filter(price <= price_threshold)

#must also account for lower outliers in price
sum(df$price == 0) #air bnb's with a price of 0 are questionable and removal may be advisable

[1] 11

df$price <- ifelse(df$price < 10, 10, df$price) # As a broader case, replace prices #below $10 with 10 and above $1000 with 1000. The replacement helps retain information
#without limiting the impact on the model

Replace minimum_nights above 30 with 30, same reasoning as before to keep information
without negatively impacting the model accuracy
df$minimum_nights <- ifelse(df$minimum_nights > 30, 30, df$minimum_nights) ggplot(df, aes(x = minimum_nights)) + geom_histogram(color = "black", fill = 'green') + labs(title = "Distribution of Minimum Nights After Removing Outliers", x = "Minimum Nights", y = "Count")

Distribution of Minimum Nights After Removing Outliers

# Convert categorical variables to factors through label encoding, works for decision
# trees but will need to adjust for the linear regression model
df$neighbourhood_group <- as.factor(df$neighbourhood_group)
df$room_type <- as.factor(df$room_type)
#
# Create dummy variables for 'neighbourhood_group' and 'room_type'
df <- df %>%

mutate(
borough_num = as.factor(neighbourhood_group),
room_type_num = as.factor(room_type)
)

One-hot encode 'room_type' and 'neighbourhood_group'
df_encoded <- df %>%

    room_type_num = as.factor(room_type)
  )

df_encoded <- cbind(df_encoded, model.matrix(~ room_type + neighbourhood_group - 1, data = df_encoded))

Target Encoding for ‘neighbourhood’

Compute mean price per neighbourhood
neighbourhood_price <- df %>%
  group_by(neighbourhood) %>%
  summarise(mean_price = mean(log_price))

Merge with the main dataset
df_encoded <- df_encoded %>%
  left_join(neighbourhood_price, by = "neighbourhood")

Feature Engineering Interaction Terms

Create interaction between room type and neighbourhood group
df_encoded <- df_encoded %>%
  mutate(
    interaction_term = interaction(room_type, neighbourhood_group)
  )

One-hot encode the interaction term
df_encoded <- cbind(df_encoded, model.matrix(~ interaction_term - 1, data = df_encoded))

Using Geographical Coordinates

Create features based on latitude and longitude
df_encoded <- df_encoded %>%
  mutate(
    lat_long = latitude * longitude
  )

```

Splitting Data into Training and Testing Sets

set.seed(123)
We'll predict 'price' (not log_price) to match original approach train_index <- createDataPartition(df_encoded$price, p = 0.8, list = FALSE) train_data <- df_encoded[train_index, ]

test_data <- df_encoded[-train_index, ]

```

Feature Scaling

Identify numeric features to scale
numeric_features <- c("log_minimum_nights", "number_of_reviews", "reviews_per_month", "availability_365"

Scale numeric features
preProcValues <- preProcess(train_data[, numeric_features], method = c("center", "scale")) train_data[, numeric_features] <- predict(preProcValues, train_data[, numeric_features]) test_data[, numeric_features] <- predict(preProcValues, test_data[, numeric_features])

Residual standard error: 39.6 on 38285 degrees of freedom
Multiple R-squared:  0.8501, Adjusted R-squared:  0.8498
F-statistic:  3193 on 68 and 38285 DF,  p-value: < 2.2e-16

Findings: Significant Predictors: ‘neighbourhood_group’, ‘room_type’, ‘minimum_nights’, and ‘availability_365’. Model Performance: Adjusted R-squared of approximately 0.35, indicating that the model explains about 35% of the variance in ‘price’. An interesting observation to make is that the test lists the neighbourhood group/ borough Staten Island and not significantly significant with a p value of 0.30. It is also noted that the Borough Queens is relatively large compared to its other neighbourhood groups but is still significant at an alpha level of .01

Residual Analysis for Linear Regression

Plot residuals
par(mfrow = c(2, 2), mar = c(4, 4, 2, 1))  # Adjust the bottom, left, top, and right margins plot(lm_model)

Observation:

Residuals vs Fitted: Indicates non-linearity. Normal Q-Q: Residuals deviate from the normal line, especially at the tails. Scale-Location: Heteroscedasticity is present. Residuals vs Leverage: No extreme outliers detected.

Findings:

Model Performance: RMSE of approximately $68.75, which is lower than the linear model's RMSE. Important Variables: 'room_type_num' and 'borough_num' are the most important predictors.

Model Comparison

Predict using linear model
lm_model <- lm(price ~ ., data = train_data_encoded) lm_predictions <- predict(lm_model, newdata = test_data_encoded)

Calculate mean absolute error
test_mae_lm <- mean(abs(lm_predictions - test_data_encoded$price))

Calculate RMSE for linear model
rmse_lm <- sqrt(mean((lm_predictions - test_data_encoded$price)^2))

Compare RMSEs
rmse_values <- data.frame(
  Model = c("Linear Regression"),
  MAE = c(test_mae_lm),
  RMSE = c(rmse_lm))
```

```

    RMSE = c(rmse_lm)
)
print(rmse_values)

Model      MAE      RMSE
1 Linear Regression 25.13453 39.45833
baseline_prediction <- mean(train_data_encoded$price) baseline_mae <- mean(abs(baseline_prediction - test_data_encoded$price)) baseline_rmse <- sqrt(mean((baseline_prediction - test_data_encoded$price)^2)) print(c(baseline_mae, baseline_rmse))

[1] 73.29127 103.54657

Results:

Linear Regression RMSE: Approximately $88.94

6. Conclusions

Key Influencing Factors: Location (borough), room type, minimum nights, and availability significantly impact Airbnb listing prices in NYC. Model Performance: The Random Forest model outperforms the Linear Regression model, indicating the presence of non-linear relationships. Recommendations for Hosts: Optimize pricing strategies by considering the impact of room type and location. Adjust minimum nights and availability to influence pricing positively. Recommendations for Guests: Look beyond popular boroughs like Manhattan to find more affordable options. Consider room types and booking durations to get better deals.
